THE FINANCIAL WORLD.

The effect of the recent decline in prices has not been so far-reaching or disastrous to what is known as the 'public" as it was in May, 1901. At that time commission houses were loaded up with stocks held by customers who came from all the walks of life. In most instances the margins put up represented on Report of Bankers' ly, when the violent break in prices came they could give no further security, and Pool to Extend Relief in the stocks were sold at a loss. It was the survival of the fittest, and the "public" has never been as fully represented in the market. Those who are suffering now were originally possessed of inde pendent fortunes. Probably many of this transactions in this morning's stock class have been financially crippled, but market were effected at advances rang- the instances are few compared with the of which President Cleveland refused to not in any of the semi-public rooms of ing from % to nearly 1 point. There great number who were ruined on blue ealt in fractionally below vesterday's inal prices.

The trading was in fairly large volume, and well distributed. The tenency of the market was altogether basdency of the market was altogether based upon the Intelligence which became public yesterday afternoon with regard to the formation of a large bankers pool to extend relief to the money market should extraordinary assistance become necessary.

American stocks were strong in the London market, also on this intelligence. The advances there approximated 1 per cent. The Venezuelan situation appeared to cut no special figure in either the London or the local market.

The tone after the opening was somewhat feverish, although, on the whole, the early advances were very well maintained.

The steel stocks were well supported in the industrial quarter, and Sugar Refining was firm. Amalgamated Copper was likevise steady. Manhattan Railway was the strongest feature of the local.

To restore confidence vesterday elevented the custom to do do that, even though strong enough to do that, even though the customer promptly responded to the calls for margin. Since that time, most of the pools have made their arrangements direct with banks to carry their holdings, and this has been the case with many individual operators. It is the business, of course, of a bank to lend money, and so long as the margin of 20 or 30 points is kept intact the borrowers need fear no seiling of his collateral by the bank. His only fear is a raising of the rate of interest, and as it is the custom to make only call loans on stocks, this fear is always impending. Apparently, in the recent decline, the pools and other borrowers were unable to maintain the margin of 20 or 30 points. This unquestionably caused liquidation, but now that prices have dropped from the high point of September about 24 points, the banks have concluded that a further drop would precipitate a disastrous panic, which would cripple the whole financial world.

To restore confidence yesterday, elever banks entered into a pool to lend $50, 000,000 at the market in case an emergency should arise, but no specuation is to be eucouraged. The management of the pool will be under the direction of J. P. Morgan, President Stillman, of the City Bank, and President George F. Baker, of the First National, its organization began last week, when call mone rose to 12 per cent, but it was not unti yesterday that the pool was perfected Eight of the banks subscribed $5,000,00 restored confidence to many smalle banks. Should these banks be called up for their full subscription the bank statement probably would show a decrease in the respective reserves.
